KNOWLES DOUGES QUESTION

How Jon Knowles refused to submit to questions from James Connors, owner of a sanatorium and rest camp at Norcross, Me., who travelled one hundred miles to ask Knowles why he did not bring back from the woods proof that he had actually made his primitive man test, is told in today's AMERICAN.

Connors was in the audience at the Bauror, Me., Opera House on the night of Tuesday, November 25. When Knowles concluded his lecture by inviting questions from the audience Connors stood up and the following dialogue between him and Knowles took place:

Asks for Proof.
Connors—Will you, Mr. Knowles, answer a question which I may ask from here on my standing? I have come a hundred miles to ask it. You claim you have killed a deer, killed it with your hands.
Knowles—I not only claim I have, I know I have.
Connors—How long have you been in the woods did you contemplate this trip?
Knowles—More than a year.
Connors—Now, Knowles, did it ever occur to you that people would be skeptical that better proof would produce more confidence in the people.
Knowles—The only thing I thought of, I wondered if I could do this thing. I began to believe I could treat myself alone and felt safe.
Connors—You are acquainted with firearms. Would a deer that was shot bear some sign on its skin?
Knowles—If the deer was shot in the flesh, that would not show on the skin.
Connors—Are you not a glutton? Wouldn't the engraved blood show some effect? If you had killed a deer by your hands alone, why didn't you preserve the skeleton?

Time Now to Earn Xmas Money

You boys who are ambitious enough to earn your own Christmas money get twice as much fun out of the holidays as the fellows who don't know what work is.

But, remember, it pays to start in early. You should be making Christmas money and saving it right now. Look through the "Help Wanted" ads in the American today and see if someone doesn't want a boy to work after school. Maybe you'll find a good proposition from one of the many concerns who need extra help for the Christmas rush.

If there's nothing attractive being offered today, a little "Want Ad" of your own may carry a good "part-time" job along. You can leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, or the Girl Sorry She Beat Boys for "Peeping"

BROOKTON, Dec. 6.—When two high school boys attempted to "peep" at pretty fifteen-year-old Miss Alice Monahan of No. 62 Wheeler avenue, while she was admiring a pair of "tango" stockings, Miss Monahan pushed a barbed stick from the front hall, cut out the back way and hit the pair over the heads.

Miss Monahan was then silent with remorse. She escorted the boys into the house and tenderly dressed their wounds. She refused to give their names, stating that they were probably just "silly" things.

Mrs. Marjorie Graff, wife who was attacked with "poisoned needle" in theatre at Newark, N. J.

The strange "poisoned needle" cases in New York, which have attracted a nation-wide interest, may help to solve several baffling mysteries of the drug and young women in Boston, according to the police.

It is the police theory that "poisoned needle" stunts to those used in New York have been used here and other large cities of the country, particularly by "white slavers" in dressing young women victims.

Since Mrs. Marjorie Graff, a bride of a week, was poisoned by being stuck with a needle as she sat in the lot of a Newark, N. J., theatre, the police have been active in search of "poisoned needles." They say that the "poisoned needle" method of attack has been used in all history in the use of similar needles by the Magicians in the Middle Ages.

Herbs and Lizard Skin.
Expert chemists declare the poison used in the case of Mrs. Graff was a poisonous narcotic made by South American tribes from herbs and the skin of certain lizards. The South Americans call the drug "wool-wool" and "wool-wool" and sometimes "wool-wool" and "wool-wool."

The trafficker in the use of the poisoned needle is the theatre, a young South American, who was arrested in the Newark police, he held in Newark, N. J., for a charge of assault.

The Newark police declared they found a deadly needle in the theatre box where Mrs. Graff says she was attacked and where the needle became faint and dizzy after being a "poisoned" needle.

Since Mrs. Graff's arrest two other cases where needles in the use of the poisoned needle have been called to the attention of the police. The theory is that used as a possible key in the case of a woman, who was attacked in a theatre box after being a "poisoned" needle.

Police in a vesting cloth leading from the kitchen of a theatre restaurant on Washington street, in an air shaft in the rear, attended to the case of a woman and caused a loss of $200 today.

Great excitement has been created in the ranks of the Volunteers in Ulster province by the proclamation and rumors that arms already stored in Ulster by the anti-borne rule party would be seized.

KIEV BOY HUB TELLS OF BEILIS TRIAL

Charging that the world-famous Beilis trial grew out of a quarrel with a lamp-lighter, Simon Solomon, thirteen, a Kiev, Russia, boy, now in Boston, tells a striking story of the affair.

He says his father employed Beilis, and that the accused lived for years in the same house with him.

Give Beilis Money.
He says that since his release, a few weeks ago, on the charge of having killed a Christian boy, Beilis has accumulated considerable wealth. Most of this has come, however, from gifts of persons in all parts of the world who have become sympathetic on account of the orations that he has been compelled to face within the past two years.

The boy says: "I have known Mendel Beilis ever since I was a very small boy. There has always been more or less trouble in Kiev between the Jewish people and the Christians."

Lamp-lighter's Quarrel.

"The trouble all started over a row Beilis had with a lamp-lighter in our neighborhood. It was during the feast of the Passover that the lamp-lighter refused to light the lamps for Beilis and Beilis threatened against his neglect. This really was the cause of the trouble, because it was this lamp-lighter who first accused Beilis of the killing."

"The Jewish people in the town never believed Beilis guilty. They believed the boy was slain by a gang of thieves who had been gathering a harvest throughout the town. The only boy here who knew about them to the agents of the czar."

"I knew personally that at the time it was said that Beilis murdered the boy he was really taking a sort of a plain crucifix for the children to eat. The boy was found in the pit not far from our house."

THIRD DEFENDER TO BE CALLED THE TRICITY

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A second conference between the members of a syndicate to build a third foot for the defense of the American cup next summer and the probable builders will be held here today and it is expected that the contract with all preliminary be signed.

President John S. Hyde of the Bath, Me., Iron Works, to which concern the contract for the construction of the foot will probably be awarded, and George Owen of Newton, Mass., the yacht designer, held a conference with George M. Trenchard of this city and E. Walker, clerk of Philadelphia, at which plans of construction were discussed. Trenchard and Walker are the two principal members of the New York Yacht Club, one of the syndicate plans to build the foot.

At several of the members of the syndicate are from Boston, the third title in the East. Hyde, however, and it is planned to call the entire "Tricity" foot.

Much interest in the prospective foot is being manifested among the fishermen because of the attraction of Mr. Owen into the American cup field, and the possible awarding of the contract for construction of the foot concern. Mr. Hyde is taking a personal interest in the project.

Hobby Applies for Reds' Managership

CINCINNATI, Dec. 6.—Richard Hoffmann, first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, has made a formal application for the managership of the club to Harry Stephen, its secretary.

Although there have been other applicants for the job, Hoffmann is the only one of these to receive consideration. The application by Hoffmann was made in consideration by the directors of the club, does not mean that the player will be made the manager, according to Mr. Stephen, but that Hoffmann will be rated on even terms with other men who are now being discussed for the position.

MANY STARS IN SCHOOL ALUMNI GAMES TODAY

Football will again predominate in Greater Boston sports today. Although the school game will settle the question of supremacy at Waltham and Melrose this afternoon.

The Gamma Eta Kappa Fraternity teams of Waltham and Melrose will meet at Waltham High School field and the Melrose and Melrose High teams will fight it on the Fulton street grounds.

These games have caused unusual interest, as many of the players who will take part are former college stars.

The Waltham team will be captained by John J. Murphy, who was a star at Waltham High School. The Melrose team will be captained by John J. Murphy, who was a star at Melrose High School.

School Notes

George White, the star halfback, has been elected captain of the Hingham football team for next season. White was one of the best backfield men in school circles this season, and much of the success of the team was due to his individual work.

Dorchester High is to have a swimming team and it is expected a championship will be developed. Wheeler, Marks, Campbell, Bates and Pyle are the strongest candidates for the team and practice will start soon at the Curtis Hall pool.

Paul Johnson, the right guard, was elected captain of the Cambridge Latin school team for 1914. This came as a surprise as it was expected that Corey would be elected.

Track athletics will be a major sport at Cambridge Latin and more interest than ever before will be taken in the track team season. Class games will be held to bring out a great number of candidates. Practice will start Monday afternoon on the circular pool on Russell Field. Paul Johnson will coach the team.

Twenty-two members of the Newton High football squad were awarded "N's". They are Captain Brady, White, Brown, and others.

Thomas Fisher was appointed manager and Thomas Fisher captain of the Boston College High swimming team. The team will be practicing with several school teams for next season.

At a meeting of the Boston Latin swimming team Ernest O'Connell was elected captain. Candidates will not be called until next Christmas.

The challenge issued by Helen High to Everett High has been turned down by the Everett team. The challenge was issued by Helen High to Everett High to play a football game on December 12 at Everett. The challenge was turned down by Everett High.

Sidelights on Sports

If the Federal League is to succeed it must succeed in the last season that is to come for it will never have a better year to establish itself in the proper manner. And if it does not succeed in the next twelve months it would do well to cash in its chips and quit the baseball game.

It is no penny ante season that the Federals are sitting down to. It is a battle-axe game and it takes money to play that brand of poker. The officials of the so-called "new-law" organization say that each club in the circuit has put up a guarantee of $25,000, making a total of $250,000 for eight clubs. This is a large sum of money for a new organization. It is to be presumed that this fund represents the millions of war which will be the league's income for the first year for a foot-hold on the baseball battlefield.

Stupidity and Graft vs. a City's Need

In the Sierra Nevada Mountains, high above the city of San Francisco, and near enough to be reached for a water supply, is a gorge called the Hetch Hetchy.

Through this gorge the Tulumne River winds, and its waters go to waste.

The beautiful, pure water from the mountains runs into the river channel, and then through gravel beds below the ground it wanders back to the ocean—lost and wasted.

The Hetch Hetchy gorge is an actual reservoir, standing ready, as though a special Providence had prepared it, to hold and save the waters of the Tulumne for the great city and the beautiful farms nearby.

The government of the United States controls this gorge and has the power to give or refuse to San Francisco an unlimited, perpetual supply of pure water.

All that is necessary is to close up the Hetch Hetchy, save the waters of the Tulumne, take these waters in pipes to San Francisco—giving on the way what the farmers may need—and the problem of the water question in San Francisco is solved forever.

It is extremely difficult to believe that men in the Senate calling themselves "progressive" are working to prevent the carrying out of a plan that would benefit untold millions of human beings for centuries to come.

Yet it is a fact that some of those who have power in government, some of those supposed to represent the people in the Senate, ARE WORKING TO PREVENT THE USE OF THIS NATURAL RESERVOIR, WORKING TO KEEP THE PEOPLE FROM GETTING THEIR SUPPLY OF WATER FROM THE HETCH HETCHY.

You need scarcely be told the reason. Corporations make money out of San Francisco by controlling the water supply and selling the water.

If the government should permit the people of San Francisco to store up and utilize the waters of the Hetch Hetchy, San Francisco would be free from the corporations, free from the extortionate charge for the water supply, and forever furnished with pure and healthy water.

It ought to be possible in some way to overcome the cunning and well paid objectors who stand in the way of this great improvement.

The East, the North, the South and the Middle West should bring pressure upon the government and give to San Francisco the water that she needs and should have.

It is inconceivable that any man in power, any Senator, should vote to keep a great American city at the mercy of water speculators, of corporations that take millions in return for the pure water that really costs nothing.

Among others who object to the proposed Hetch Hetchy water supply plans are well meaning, more or less badly informed so-called "nature lovers."

These self-confident and self-satisfied enthusiasts are brought to the front to say that it would be a pity to destroy the valley of the Hetch Hetchy.

It is a beautiful valley. But it is not as beautiful as it would be with a magnificent lake of clear water reflecting the sky, increasing the splendor of the rising hills and BENEFITING MILLIONS OF WORKING HUMAN BEINGS ON THE OCEAN'S EDGE BELOW.

These so-called "nature lovers" and the cunning well-paid men in the Senate who work to earn the money of corporations—declare that they oppose the Hetch Hetchy plans because THEY LOVE NATURE.

If the lake were there every sincere lover of nature would demand that it be preserved and protest against draining it, even though the draining might give thousands of fertile acres to agriculture.

It is now—the bottom of the Hetch Hetchy gorge is swampy—it is useless as land. IT IS NOT VISITED BY AS MANY AS TWENTY MEN AND WOMEN IN THE COURSE OF A WHOLE YEAR.

Even if it were more beautiful in this swampy, half-dry condition than it would be as a useful lake, would it be worth while to keep the gorge empty to oblige the eyes of twenty occasional travellers in a year? The establishment of a reservoir, the creation of the lake of pure water, WILL HELP THE GREATEST CITY OF THE WESTERN COAST. IT WILL HELP THE MILLIONS THAT WILL SOON COME IN AND SETTLE WITH THE OPENING OF THE PANAMA CANAL.

But Nature has provided a reservoir for the city of San Francisco. A river of pure water runs to that reservoir, and with practically an insignificant expenditure of money San Francisco's need of pure water can be supplied forever.

The government of the United States has the power to give this reservoir, this water supply, to the great city, and at the same time to give pure water for irrigation to many farms between the Hetch Hetchy and San Francisco.

A few sickly, sentimental "nature lovers," of whom the majority have never seen the Hetch Hetchy, protest against the improvement, because they think they like an empty gorge better than a gorge with a beautiful lake at its bottom. These "nature lovers" and some of the so-called "progressive" Senators—VERY PROGRESSIVE INDEED WHEN A CORPORATION HANDS OUT THE RIGHT INDUCEMENT—are fighting against this necessary gift to San Francisco: to a great body of the American people.

For what is the property of the nation intended if not for the benefit of the citizens and of the cities of the nation?

This newspaper tells the "progressive Senators," who seem to have been goaded to a peculiar kind of progress by money-making corporations, and tell those corporations, that they might as well yield. NOW AS LATER. The water supply in the mountains belongs to the people below.

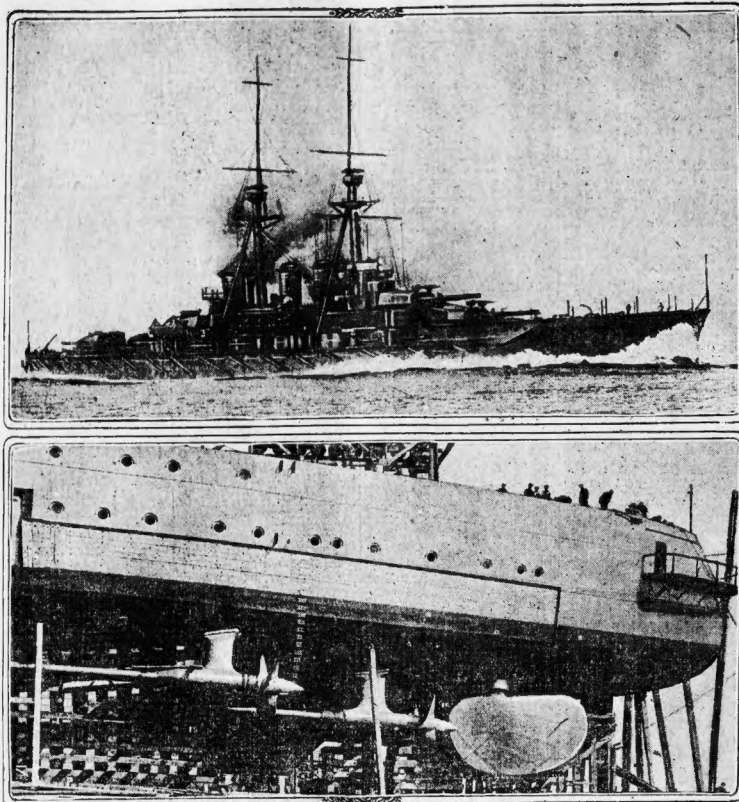

The property of the government is the property OF THE CITIZENS. The water which falls upon the sides of the Sierra Nevada mountains was intended and should be given to the people that work and build below.

San Francisco will have the Hetch Hetchy, the pure water will be saved, stored up and delivered to human beings, instead of running to waste through the gravel beds underground back to the ocean.

Every man in office who opposes this necessary and just demand of San Francisco will clean himself as an ignorant sentimentalist—one in ten, perhaps—and, as a willing corruptor, nine in ten.

And the people should remember that.

Japan Builds While We Talk!

At the top is the Kongo, one of Japan's new battle cruisers afloat. Her sister ship, the Kirishima, was launched Monday. Two more exact duplicates are building.

WHILE two, larger than any now afloat, are being envisioned in the eyes of our Secretary of the Navy, phantoms merely and at the moment optical illusions, Japan is building ships of the battle cruiser type—building them of steel, not of phrases; building them in Nagasaki and in England, wherever they could be most swiftly rushed to completion in preparation for—what?

The picture here shows the type of these two ships, the Kirishima, still building, and the Kongo, recently completed. Experts describe them as of a type distinctly their own, uniting the strength of the super-dreadnought with the speed of a swift cruiser, being capable of twenty-eight knots an hour. In the case of the Kongo this speed was exceeded in the trials.

These ships are built from plans prepared in the light of experience gained in the Russo-Japanese war—experience which the secretive Japanese are not sharing with other peoples. Their armament is eight fourteen-inch and sixteen-inch guns, with six torpedo tubes. They are fitted to burn either coal or oil. In many respects they have no equal for efficiency in our own or any other navy. We have nothing in our own navy comparing as they do the cardinal qualities of speed, strength and gun power. The Japanese, so far as the world knows, has no threatening Mexican situation on hand, no Panama Canal ever opening new international problems and demanding defence. They are, however, the people who recently objected to the laws of California.

But as an alert, progressive nation, they realize the importance of naval preparedness, and are securing it while we are talking about it. With us a Secretary of the Navy is talking about a "naval holiday" and recommending two battleships with calm indifference to the recommendation of the General Board for four. With us a public and pinch-penny Congress looks askance on even the recommendations of the Secretary for an inadequate navy, and will even be driven to its duty if it have the two battleships are to be authorized. Yet we confront problems which for gravity are not exceeded by those before any great naval power of the earth. And in the face of it all we talk and Japan builds.

The Japanese government could not understand how an admiral could, without effect, address to his superiors such words as those of Admiral Dewey: "The absence of any definite naval policy on our part, except in the General Board, and the failure of the people, the Congress and the executive government to recognize the necessity for such a policy, has already placed us in a position of inferiority which may lead to war; and this inferiority is progressive, and will continue to increase until the necessity for a definite policy is recognized and that policy put into operation. The AMERICAN presents this picture and these facts to its readers, that they may see for themselves the vital difference between talking of an adequate navy and building one."

A Place for Healthful Play Will Do the Children of East Boston More Good Than a Dozen Curfew Laws

Who is to blame for the terrible conditions lately brought to light among the children of East Boston?

Why is it that ministers, policemen and citizens are today calling for a State curfew law and other statutes that will compel parents to take care of their children?

We ask the city of Boston to call to mind the time when hundreds of these very same children marched over to the Council chamber, scarcely two years ago, with a petition in their hands, signed by many thousands of East Boston parents and school children, pleading for an opening onto the sea where they could play under proper supervision.

The children pleaded for their own salvation at the door of City Hall. They asked for the one thing that would give them the outlet essential to child life and without which no natural child in this world can grow up into full, sane manhood—the opportunity for play, under wholesome conditions.

A pathetic cry was raised from East Boston by parents who knew what was coming and were helpless to do anything unless the great mother city held out her hand and helped them.

Are the parents to blame that the city of Boston failed to hear the cry for the lives of their children and for what was more dear than life, the honor of their boys and girls?

Boston, with its great acreage of parks and playgrounds, with its Commonwealth avenue, its Fenway and its Charles River Esplanade, thought two hundred thousand dollars too large a sum for the children and parents of East Boston.

The parents—who are now so severely criticised by clergymen and court officials, came then to the AMERICAN and pleaded once more for help.

An investigation was made and conditions of child life were found to be as bad as represented. The AMERICAN called a mass meeting of citizens, and again came to the City Council with the story of children who could not play and parents who were frantic in the knowledge that their girls and boys were subjected to temptations that the strongest of wills might bow before.

And now comes a court record a little worse than a hundred others that fill the East Boston books of childish delinquency, and Boston is made more to hear the stories, told over and over again by the Boston AMERICAN, in the hope that the city would hear and take warning.

No! the parents are not to be blamed greatly, and it would be a sad sight to see the children on sultry Summer evenings whipped into their sweltering homes by a curfew law, when within a stone's throw, separated by high twenty-foot commercial fences, lie the cool waters of Boston Harbor, bordered by land that might, if the city saw fit, be turned into a place for wholesome, happy play.

Twenty-eight children brought into court for evils that may well ruin them for life against $200,000. Is it time to act, or must there be more years of useless talk until that court record, grown more and more horrible, shames us into our civic duty?

Shakespeare the Stage Manager

By REV. C. F. AKED, LL. D.

MR. MANTELL'S "Macbeth" and "Hamlet" serve to remind us of that which Shakespeare is the supreme, consummate poet of our race, he was, incidentally, a London theatre manager who made a fortune.

In the year that "Macbeth" was produced in London was full of Scotchmen attracted by the accession of James VI. King of Scotland, to the English throne. He reigned as James I. of England. He was the son of Mary, Queen of Scots, but he boasted little of his mother's ill-fated beauty.

John Richard Green, the historian of the English people, seems to delight in a description of the repulsive appearance presented by this King with his "big head, goggle eyes, rickety legs and slobbering tongue."

The historian goes on to add details about his vulgar buffoonery, his coarseness, his contemptible cowardice. He was a drunkard and a sot. He was suspected of vice compared with which drunkenness is a mere Summer idyll.

In the very year in which James became King of England, Shakespeare wrote "Hamlet." "There's such divinity doth hedge a king," But Scotchmen socked to London. The Scotch burr was heard on a thousand tongue; Scotch dishes, Scotch dress, Scotch drinks became popular. Scotch fashions were in the air.

Shakespeare was luscious of inventing a plot. He looked about him for good material for his plays, and then made the best of it. He found matter that he thought would work out well in a couple of volumes published nearly thirty years before Holinshed's "Chronicles of England, Scotland and Ireland." It occurred to him that Scotch play would stand a good chance of immediate success. He found the story of Macbeth in the "Fetters of the goggle-eyed person upon the throne knew no measure, bound or limit. The throne and Ireland."

lators of the Bible declared their work to James and hailed his appearance as that of the sun. "His strength," when he spoke at the Hampton Court Conference of Divines, Whitgift, Archbishop of Canterbury, declared that he had spoken by the special inspiration of God's spirit. Bancroft, who was soon to be Archbishop, fell on his knees and cried out that there had been no such king since Christ's time. The lawyers were not to be beaten by the preachers in falsehood and flattery; and so Coke, the Attorney-General, extolled James as "divinely illuminated by Almighty God, and like unto an angel of God."

Shakespeare must needs join, though more adroitly, in more subtle ways, in this homage to the King. In Holinshed, Banquo is an accomplice with Macbeth in the murder of Duncan. But this would never do. Banquo was the reputed founder of the House of Stuart, of which James was the third. James is supposed to be a literal descendant of him. And in Shakespeare, Banquo becomes an admirable person, full of grace and dignity, a victim of Macbeth's jealousy and fear.

And more: the union of Scotland with England and Ireland seemed to the men of that day a very important matter, as indeed it was. And a line omitted by Mr. Mantel, as having no significance for American theatregoers, preserves Shakespeare's recognition of it along with his compliment to the King. When Macbeth sees Banquo's descendants, the line of them so long that he begins to think it will stretch out to the crack of doom, he exclaims, "And some I see that two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry." The two-fold ball refers to the double coronation of James, first at St. James as King of Scotland, second at Westminster as King of England. The treble sceptre is that of England, Scotland and Ireland.
